

ROOSEVELT IS MUCH BETTER, GOING HOME

(By United Press.)
Chicago, Ill., Oct. 19.—Colonel Roosevelt's physicians announced today that he would be taken from Mercy hospital to Oyster Bay at 8:15 a. m. Monday on the 24-hour train of the Pennsylvania railroad. The physicians attending the Colonel gave out the following statement:
"Pulse 85, temperature 98 and respiration 20. Breathing easier. Resting well. General condition good and convalescence rapid."
Signed by Drs. Murphy, Bovin, Lambert and Terrill.
Dr. Lambert said the Colonel would not be able to make speeches for some time, but that he would be allowed to take an active part in the campaign before it is over.
"At present," he said, "the only thing we are worrying about is that fourth rib, but it looks all right, and if it knits properly the Colonel may make speeches."
It has been originally planned to have Roosevelt leave the hospital on Tuesday. The examination of the patient led the physicians to decide that owing to his improved condition and his anxiety to be at home being so great, that his recovery would be hastened by the earlier removal. Owing to his daytime departure and the publicity that will necessarily attend it, a large detail of police will be asked of Mayor Harrison. The crowd will be kept at a distance in order not to excite the patient to tempt him to make a speech.
The Colonel will be accompanied on the trip home by the immediate members of his family and by Drs. Terrill and Lambert. On the way east the two physicians will watch closely for any infection of the wound.

JACK JOHNSON IS HELD ON ABDUCTION CHARGE, WAS ATTACKED BY MOB

(By United Press.)
Chicago, Ill., Oct. 19.—A howling mob that blocked traffic for nearly a block in front of the National Bank building, gathered around Jack Johnson, the pugilist, this afternoon, when he drove up in front of the building.
Threats of violence were thrown at him from every side and as he entered the building his golden smile was replaced by a hunted, frightened look. The mob grew as he remained in the building, transacting business, and instead of again using the Dearborn entrance he quietly slipped out of a rear door and hurried away.
Aroused to action by the reported statements of Jack Johnson, negro pugilist, women's clubs throughout the city are banding together in a determined effort to drive him from Chicago. It is pointed out that Johnson's alleged statements about his alleged ability to "get" the best white women in the city and his insulting manner towards Mrs. Cameron, mother of Lucile Cameron, have emboldened other members of his race.
(By United Press.)
Chicago, Oct. 19.—Jack Johnson, negro pugilist, put a quietus on rumors that he had been shot by appearing in Judge Hopkins' court today to answer to the charge of abduction.
His bail was raised from $300 until October 29th to allow the $1500 and his case continued until the United States government time to gather evidence against him. Johnson was ten minutes late in his appearance in court and Attorney Erbstein, for the mother of Lucile Cameron, white girl, demanded that his bail be forfeited.
"Will you marry Lucile Cameron?" a reporter demanded of the prize fighter.
"I'm intending to marry her, no matter what happens to her. No matter how she gets, I'm perfectly on the square, but because I love her. I fell in love with her the first time I met her in my cage."
Mrs. Cameron, through attorney Erbstein, had her case continued until October 26th. Johnson has arranged to supply the $25,000 bail demanded for her release. Miss

(By Associated Press.)
Detroit, Mich., Oct. 19.—The formal opening of the $10,000,000 Livingstone channel in the lower Detroit river was scheduled to take place this afternoon. The new channel is on the west side of Bois Blanc island, starting near the head of the island and extending up towards Lake Erie. It required four and a half years to build it.

COX IS COMING

CONGRESSMAN JAMES M. COX

Hon. James M. Cox, of Dayton, Democratic candidate for governor of Ohio, will be in Portsmouth next Wednesday evening, October 23rd, and deliver an address at the Grand Opera house. Accompanying Mr. Cox will be Hon. John J. Lentz and possibly one other noted speaker and as all are finished orators the meeting is bound to be a most interesting one.

Owing to the short time before the meeting, an extra hustle will have to be made by the Democrats to complete arrangements for the meeting. The Grand Opera house had been booked for the Keyes Stock company, which plays all next week at the Grand, but the manager of the company graciously consented to give up Wednesday night for the meeting, an act much appreciated by local Democrats.

Mr. Cox, who comes to Portsmouth next Wednesday evening, will have a message of interest to every voter and especially to working people. He is an earnest progressive American in his views on public questions and advocates every measure to crush monopoly that came up during his congressional career.

Further details of the meeting will be announced in Monday's Times.

Word was received Saturday afternoon that Mr. Cox and Mr. Lentz would speak at Waverly Wednesday afternoon and immediately after he meeting would come to Portsmouth.

BRYAN IN OHIO, RAPS PANIC TALK

(By United Press.)
Urbana, O., Oct. 19.—Starting at Urbana today on a two days tour of Ohio in behalf of Woodrow Wilson, William Jennings Bryan recited a "panic primer" which he said shows the fallacy of Republican threats of a panic in case Wilson is elected. The "panic primer" was in the form of a political monologue with questions and answers.

An immense crowd greeted the Nebraska here. Other towns to be visited by the commoner are Bellefontaine, Ada, Lima, Sidney, Lima, Hamilton and a night meeting at Dayton.

At Bellefontaine, Bryan handled both Taft and Roosevelt without gloves. President Taft, Bryan declared repeatedly, does not trust the people, while Roosevelt had always trained with the interests he is now denouncing.

"One very good reason why Roosevelt should not be elected is because he gave us Taft," said Bryan. "One who has failed so miserably in picking another should not be so confident in picking himself. The chief difference between Taft and Roosevelt is over the question which will occupy the White House during the next four years."

TRANSFERRED FEUD CASES

(By Associated Press.)
Lexington, Ky., Oct. 19.—Special Judge Newell, who was appointed to try the fifteen men charged with complicity in the murder of Sheriff Ed. Callahan, in the Jackson county court, today transferred all the cases for trial to Winchester, upholding the claim of the prosecution that the men could not get a fair trial in Breathitt county.

Robert Martin, who was operated upon for appendicitis at the Hempstead hospital, Thursday, was reported considerably better Saturday. No unfavorable symptoms have so far manifested themselves.

BIG BATTLE COMING SOON IN BALKANS

(By United Press.)
London, Eng., Oct. 19.—Success by the Balkan allies against Turkey were indicated by all dispatches from the east today. Most advices were from anti-Turkish sources and it was likely they exaggerated the advantages the allies are said to have gained.

Though there has been considerable skirmishing, nothing of the proportions of a battle has occurred. Naviy Pasha, Turkish minister of war, started for the front today, according to messages from Constantinople, accompanied by a large number of foreign military observers and war correspondents.

(By Associated Press.)
London, Eng., Oct. 19.—The Turkish town of Mustapha Pasha was taken last night by the Bulgarian army corps, which is making great progress towards Adrianople. The Turks were repulsed all along the line. The Bulgarian troops have also crossed the frontier and are marching towards the towns of Tsarevovo, Garnia and Djuma. Other columns have penetrated through the passes of Rhodope mountains and marched across the frontiers.

(By United Press.)
Belgrade, Serbia, Oct. 19.—Bulgarian troops have occupied the Turkish frontier town of Mushk-Tapha Pasha on the Oriental railroad, capturing several hundred Turks, according to a dispatch from Sofia today.

(By Associated Press.)
Belgrade, Serbia, Oct. 19.—The report of the capture of Prishtina yesterday by Serbian troops was false, according to an official note issued here today.

(By United Press.)
Belgrade, Serbia, Oct. 19.—Turkish irregulars have invaded Serbia, southwest of Krashevatz and massacred the inhabitants of three villages, snoring neither men nor women, old nor young, according to a report received here.

(By Associated Press.)
London, Eng., Oct. 19.—Half a million men or more, armed with the most modern implements of war, are gathering at Adrianople, the old capital of northern Turkey, today for what military men anticipate will be a long and hard fought struggle.

Bulgaria's army, numbering approximately 200,000, reinforced by 50,000 Servians as soon as war was declared, began to fight its way in three columns through the mountain passes which divide the two countries.

The Turks already have 200,000 men in position and thousands more are arriving daily at the front, and while their adversaries, for the moment have some advantage, the two armies when they meet, will be about evenly matched.

The Turks apparently are preparing for a great battle. The drama on which the curtain is rising is practically cut off from the view of the rest of the world, as the chiefs of staff of the various armies have imposed the strictest censorship.

(By United Press.)
Vienna, Oct. 19.—The Turks are advancing through Juna pass upon Sofia, the Bulgarian capital, according to a message from Constantinople.

New York, Oct. 19.—One million tickets printed in preparation for a proposed Ball-Moore tag day will probably be wasted because of a technical violation of the city law prohibiting begging on the streets.

GARY MOURNS FOR HERO NEWSBOY

(By United Press.)
Gary, Ind., Oct. 19.—Nearly every house in this city is draped in mourning today as a token of the universal sorrow at Billy Rugh's death.

The little newsstand where Billy Rugh sold his papers for two years has been covered with crepe. Tomorrow the steel mills will be closed for the first time in their history, in order to let the employees attend the funeral.

Miss Ethel Smith, the girl for whom Rugh gave up his life, will also attend the funeral. The work of collecting funds for a suitable memorial for the dead hero was going forward rapidly today.

Schrank Hearing Delayed

(By Associated Press.)
Milwaukee, Wis., Oct. 19.—John Schrank will not be brought to trial before the middle of November unless something unforeseen happens, said Sheriff William A. Arnold, who is in daily conference with District Attorney Zabbel.

Several letters from various parts of the country commending John Schrank for the attempted assassination of Colonel Roosevelt were received today and submitted to District Attorney Zabbel.

The letters, which were evidently written by cranks, were not made public, and will not be given to the prisoner.

Latest word from the bedside of Mrs. Kate Kricker-Lannigan, of New Haven, Conn., formerly of this city, is that her condition is unchanged. She is critically ill from the effects of a surgical operation.

"Slugged" Ginseng Is Latest Of Swindles

Police were called to the Quassier's junk shop on Third street, Saturday to take Ed Horsey, of New Boston, into custody for trying to dispose of some "slugged" ginseng.

Horsey had three quarters of a pound of the root for which dealers pay 40 cents per ounce. An examination showed that some gun shot and nails were imbedded inside the root. This ingenious practice is made possible when the root is young and still green.

The root expands just beneath the head of the stalk and when it drips the holes made by sticking the shot and nails into it become closed so that it is hard to detect the trick. In this instance Dan Lybold made the discovery and refused to buy from Horsey and meanwhile notified Mr. Quassier. When Horsey came to his place, he detained him while an employe hurried to police headquarters. Officer Pearl Roush released Horsey upon his plea that he did not know the root had been "slugged" and besides had not sold any of it. The root was confiscated and taken to headquarters.

Joy Riders Not Tagged

Officer Andy Leslie was attracted to some "joy riders" who were up in front of the Manhattan restaurant in a big touring car after midnight Friday. The machine was without a license tag. Andy prepared to take the party into custody but heard they were from Trenton and as they showed a disposition to move on he decided not to interfere.

In reply Hurth declared that he was but one day late in notifying defendant to vacate at the expiration of the lease last Spring. Edgar Miller was the winning attorney and Attorney Will J. Meyer was for Hurth.

I thank you in the name of thousands of other young men, like myself."

Row Over A Dog Cause Of Warrant

Joe Distel swore out warrants in the Mayor's court Saturday for the arrest of W. O. Horn and Dudley Morton for alleged stealing of a bird dog of the value of $25.

Horn and Morton, who operate a barber shop and saloon, respectively, in the Biggs House block, have been notified to appear in police court for hearing Monday morning. Distel alleges that the two men went to his home on New Fifth street, Friday afternoon, and stole the dog. He overtook them at Jackson and Ottawa streets. They laid claim to the dog, Morton saying he had raised it, afterwards selling the canine to Horn. They, however, gave up the dog to Distel, who says he still has the crate at home in which the dog was shipped to him by Frank Smith, of Kentucky, some weeks ago.

STOLEN ARTICLES WERE FOUND IN OSBORN HOME

A little detective work of Orson H. Ogier, of the Steinkamp furniture store, and his next door neighbor and fellow merchant, D. A. Alspaugh, was rewarded Saturday when they recovered a big quantity of lost stolen from them.

For some months past the two furniture dealers have been missing tools, rope, hammers and other articles from the rear parts of their stores. A few days ago Bill Osborn, a Slaton character, was discovered in the alley entrance of the Steinkamp store. He asked for a drink of water. His actions aroused suspicion.

A search warrant was sworn out and his home on Mill street was visited Friday evening. Property belonging to the furniture firms was found all over the house. He told the police that he had borrowed the various articles. He was ordered to return all within twenty-four hours.

Later in the evening Chief Phillips caught sight of Osborn near police headquarters. He beckoned Bill to come to the office. Bill, instead, took to his heels, running through Dr. Gault's alley towards Third street.

The furniture men told the chief they did not care to prosecute the man and accordingly he escaped arrest. Some hammers belonging to Colonel Jack Morrow were also found at the Osborn home.

Finds Five Dollar Bill

William Marsh, West Side carrier of The Times, found a five-dollar bill Saturday afternoon which had no sooner got into his hands before it passed out again. A young lady stepped up to the money, and said she had lost a five-dollar bill "just exactly like that one," and he gallantly turned it over to the young lady, who was delighted to have found her money so quickly.

had lately finished his apprenticeship and was working for $3.00 a week, when it occurred to him to start in saving. He was in earnest about it; he was willing to deny himself many things. Today he has a shop of his own, is educating his family of ten children and is worth from $20,000 to $25,000.

Saving $1,000 is hard work. It is worth all the work—all the time—all the self denial you give to it. Russell Sage used to say that after a man had saved a thousand dollars the hardest part of his financial battle was over, and the accumulation of the rest was comparatively easy. If you open an account with us we help you save that thousand dollars. When you sit down and figure out just what 3 per cent a year means, when it is calculated monthly on each dollar you deposit and when it is compounded every four months—you get some idea of how we help you.

Terrible Suffering

Scarcely All Over Baby's Body.
"When my baby was four months old his face broke out with eczema, and at sixteen months of age, his face, hands and arms were in a dreadful state. The eczema spread all over his body. We had to put a mask or cloth over his face and tie up his hands. Finally we gave him Hood's Sarsaparilla and in a few months he was entirely cured. Today he is a healthy boy." Mrs. Inez Lewis, Boring, Maine.
Hood's Sarsaparilla cures blood diseases and builds up the system. Get it today under the name of Hood's Sarsaparilla or the name of the druggist who sells it.

Paid On Square

Bravely Bros. paid off their men in Government square as a matter of convenience to all Saturday. The men came from the various jobs in the city and at Sciotoville and gathered at the Security bank and on the John Doerr corner to receive their money. The contractors are doing considerable sidewalk work in the vicinity of Ninth and John streets and in the different new additions at Sciotoville.

BULL MOOSE SPEAKERS ORATED

Progressivism ran rampant at Harrisonville Friday night when Attorney Nate B. Gilliland, Wm. E. Prier, of Ironton, candidate for Congress, George L. Pake, Oscar F. Upp and Thomas Brand, county candidates, invaded the precincts and stirred the natives with their battle cries. The G. A. R. Hall was the scene of the fireworks. All the candidates were on hand with a speech.

Owing to the late arrival of the party, a number of the voters took a nap, turned over in their chairs and then shuffled off for their homes. Consequently the crowd that heard the addresses was rather slim, but at that it was bigger than the Republican meeting held earlier in the week.

From White Gravel, where some Republicans were scheduled for an address, came reports of an awful fizzle. It is a known fact that the men scheduled to make the addresses for the meeting returned home while the evening was quite young.

LOCAL MEN BUY SOUTHERN TIMBER

The Tronton Register of Friday said:

"The young man of today is inclined to think that the days for fortune making are gone, but the contrary is true, particularly if one invests in real estate. Several years ago Louis Marting of this city purchased a great rice plantation in Arkansas and in the deal the original owners of the land gave, or included in the transfer, a tract of land about 40 acres in extent. Just recently Mr. Marting disposed of this tract at the very handsome price of $50 per acre. He has vast holdings in Southern Arkansas and some day in the not very distant future will realize handsomely from his investment."

HOW BLOOD IS MADE

The liquids and the digested foods in the alimentary canal pass through the wall of the canal into the blood. This process is called absorption and takes place chiefly in the small intestine. The blood carries the food to the food through the body, and each cell takes from the blood the food it needs. A pure glyceric extract made from bloodroot, mandrake, stone, queen's root and golden seal and sold by druggists for the past forty years under the name of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, gives uniformly excellent results as a tonic to help in the assimilation of the food and in the absorption by the blood of the food it requires. It eradicates the poisons from the blood, because it contains a powerful blood purifier, and because it contains no alcohol or other injurious ingredients. Thus the body can be built up—strong to resist disease. This is a tonic taken from Nature's garden that builds up those weakened by disease. Dr. Pierce, founder of the Invalids' Hotel at Buffalo, N.Y., has received many letters similar to the following:

"I am a patient of the Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N.Y., and I have been cured of my blood disease by using your Golden Medical Discovery. I am now strong and healthy and I am able to do my work."

NEW BOSTON TO GET NEW HOTEL

New Boston is to have a first-class hotel in the near future, and it will be run by Rudy Kountz. It developed Saturday that he has taken a lease on the brick building being erected on the Gallia Pike and Grace street by Contractor J. I. Marsh. It will contain 30 rooms and Mr. Kountz will equip it with excellent furnishings and will conduct a strictly first-class hostelry. He will have a 90-foot bar on the first floor. The building will be ready for occupancy in a few weeks. Mr. Kountz stated Saturday that he had already bought all the furniture he will need to occupy his new building, which is being finished in pressed brick.

KA-TAR-NO,

THE OLD-TIME PERUNA.

"Where can I get the Ka-tar-no that I hear so much talk about?" said a bustling woman to her druggist one day. No matter what the druggist replied. We wish to say, you can get Ka-tar-no of us, in any quantity you desire. Ka-tar-no, the old-time Peruna. Ka-tar-no, guaranteed by Dr. Hartman to be the same Peruna your grandmother used to take and your mother used to give you when you were a baby.

who invest their savings in Building & Loan stock, under state supervision, know that it is not a "Get Rich Quick" scheme, but a systematic method of saving, whereby they receive a good interest on their money. In the so-called "Get Rich Quick" scheme, you seldom receive any interest at all and can consider yourself fortunate if you get back the money you invest. If you invest in stock in a Mutual Association like The Portsmouth Savings & Loan Company, Opera House Building, you can always withdraw the full amount at any time, together with all earnings, which for the past 21 years have been six per cent compounded semi-annually.

because he thinks I am too old. What do you advise me to do?

Downcast.

Dear Miss Wise—Where could I find my ideal? I want a husband who does not smoke, chew nor swear, who would give me his salary regularly, not leave me in the evenings and assist me with the housework.

Maiden Lady.

In heaven.

Dear Miss Wise—Is it correct to wear a gown with a train at an evening reception in Portsmouth?

Certainly. An evening reception is always a "dressy" affair.

Dear Miss Wise—Is there any chance for a young man to get married in Portsmouth, Ironton. Get off at the X. & W. and see.

Dear Miss Wise—What is the proper thing to do when a young girl throws a kiss at a young man?

Throw it right back at the horrid thing.

Dear Miss Wise—For several years I have been engaged to a young man a year my junior. He now wants to break the engagement.

shoes is not over. The white cloth upper is as much in evidence as a year ago, and so in the drab and stone color. Smartest of all, is, however, the heat of kid dyed to match the toilette; this the last word in elegance. One of its distinctions is that it can never become general.

Dear Miss Wise—I am going to be married. My husband is not able to take both of us on a wedding trip and he wants me to go by myself. Do you think it would be proper?

M. S. D.

If your husband cannot afford to take the money that you would spend and enjoy it with him in your own home.

Love will be much used this season in the trimming of gowns, but, with the exception of here and there an introduction of a little Venice, heavy lace are out of date, and fine proper thing to do when a young girl throws a kiss at a young man?

Earl.

Throw it right back at the horrid thing.

Dear Miss Wise—For several years I have been engaged to a young man a year my junior. He now wants to break the engagement.

This shirtwaist pattern is easy to embroider and very effective when finished. The edges of the flowers and the large figures are worked solid. The dots and ovals are done as eyelets and the stems in the outline stitch. The flowers are filled in with French knots. The collar and cuff pattern will be given next week. Use mercerized cotton No. 20.

DIRECTIONS FOR TRANSFERRING.

In taking off these patterns, lay a piece of impression paper upon the material, place the newspaper pattern over this, and with a hard, sharp pencil draw firmly over each line. If the material is sheer it may be laid over the pattern and drawn off with pencil, as the design will show through.

HE WANTED PROTECTION AGAINST ANGRY SARAH

Bruce McGlone, of Sixteenth and Chillicothe streets, called at police headquarters Friday evening and asked protection against Mrs. Sarah Hill Higgins.

McGlone said the woman had come to his house and accused him of harboring her husband, Wiley Higgins. It was with difficulty that he succeeded in getting her to leave his premises for he wanted to remain inside the law and not resort to any violence. He said that the woman's accusations were absolutely unfounded and did his wife a great injustice. He anticipated return visits from her and that was why he wanted the police to take a hand. He claimed the Higgins woman flourished a knife while at his home.

All intelligent persons, who have anything to do with natural gas, know it is dangerous if not properly and carefully handled, and they are unanimous in the opinion that all gas stoves should have flue pipe connections to a chimney and that rubber hose gas connections should be prohibited. Why take any of sickness or possibly death when it is so easy to avoid all risks, by simply having a stove like the Star Equity or Solar Equity to warm and ventilate your home and keep the air clean and pure. You can see these stoves at the office of the Gas Company. Also a list of dealers who handle them, or phone The Portsmouth Stove & Range Co. 16-19-22—adv

To the Voters of Seloto County: I desire to announce that I am a candidate for a second term for the office of Probate Judge of Seloto County. And in making this announcement I wish to sincerely thank the people of Portsmouth and Seloto County for the universal kindness that has been shown to me throughout all of my first term. And especially to I wish to thank the hundreds of parents who have so kindly aided, advised and assisted me in juvenile matters arising in this court. And whatever the future may hold in store for me, I shall feel throughout the years to come, that I have done all I could for all persons needing the assistance of this Court. It has always been customary to give an official a second term and no more, and this I desire at the hands of the voters of Seloto County. Very Truly,
THOMAS C. BEATTY.

PROFIT BY OTHERS' EXPERIENCE

Gray Hair Restored

My hair was getting quite gray and falling out rapidly and I was troubled with a terrible itching of the scalp. My head was full of dandruff, which fell upon my clothes and kept me continually brushing it off. While on a visit to Rochester I heard of your Sage and Sulphur for the hair. I got a bottle and used it. A few applications relieved the itching, my hair stopped falling out and gradually came back to its natural color. It is now a nice dark brown color, soft, glossy and pitiable. Several of my friends want to use it, and I want to know what you will charge me for six bottles of it. MISS E. A. ROSS, Sharon, Mercer Co., Pa.

It is well that all men know the consequences and after-effects of this terrible disease, and especially if it is improperly treated. It stops the progress of the disease, radiates every vestige of the poison from the system, and my cure is permanent. The disease is cured in a few hours. You are unable and extravagant claims of patent medicine and system of cure which might give temporary relief, but no permanent cure. What you want is a cure for good and no effect on your body. WHEN A MAN'S MARRIED

FATHER'S KINDLY DEED IS HELP TO CANDIDATE

GOOD SHOWS COMING

Henry Stahl, the Democratic candidate for county auditor has had some varied experiences since beginning his campaign, but one of the strangest of all occurred a few days ago.

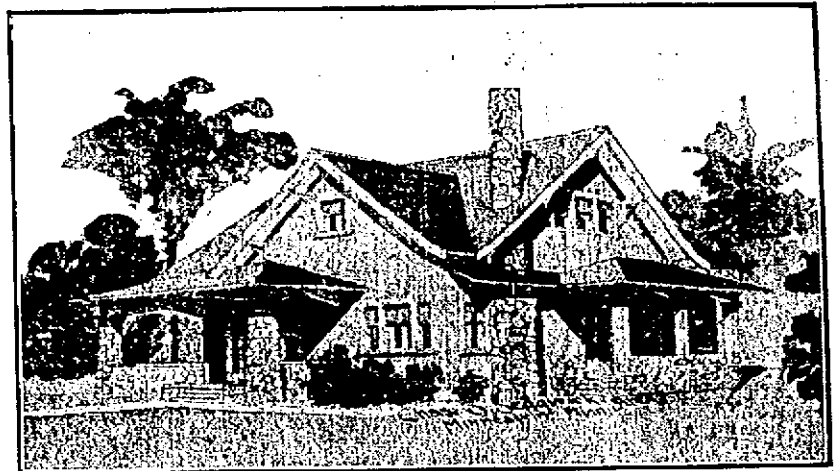

He was in the northern part of the county and accosted a man named Crabtree. He asked for his support at the polls. The man shook his head saying, "No, I'm a Socialist and nearly all of my relatives are Socialists this year." After they had conversed a few minutes, Mr. Stahl prepared to move on when suddenly halted by the former. "By the way, what do you say your name was?" he asked. "Any relation to Dave Stahl?" he asked again. When he learned the candidate was a son of the popular hardware dealer, he shook hands with him, then unfolded an interesting story of some years ago. An aged widow of that neighborhood was taken ill, and soon the family was reduced to destitute circumstances. Neighbors took care of them the best they could. One day she took a sudden turn for the worse and died.

The following day a letter was delivered to the home. As the woman had no living relatives save her small children, the neighbors were in a quandary what to do with the letter. Some suggested burning it up. Finally after debating about the matter for some time it was agreed that the letter had better be opened. The letter proved to be a brief missive from David Stahl and enclosed was a five dollar bill. He had learned of the poor woman's plight through a customer.

The money was applied to the children of the woman and it certainly came in handy, according to Mr. Crabtree who assured Stahl that he would vote for him as a mark of appreciation for his father's charitable act, and what is more would urge his friends to do likewise.

A SEVEN-ROOM BUNGALOW.

Designed by Chas. S. Sedgwick, Architect.

This convenient seven-room bungalow is 35 ft. in width and 43 ft. in depth, exclusive of the piazzas, two in number, one on the main front and one on the right hand side, both opened onto from the house with wide French windows. These piazzas are wide and built with cement floors and boulder stone walls, and the corner piers to the front built of boulder stone. The outside of the bungalow is shingled with cedar shingles, stained brown and all of the trimmings, cornices, eaves, etc., may be stained in brown or painted a light cream color. The roof is stained brown.

There are seven rooms on the main floor, with a central hall and vestibule entrance. At the right from the vestibule on the main floor is the living room, 13x19 ft., and opening out of the same with a returned arch is the dining room. The kitchen is at the rear of the dining room, large in size and has convenient pantry cupboards, and a rear stairs leading to the basement and to the attic story. At the rear of the kitchen is a liberal sized shed and a porch. Bath room opens out of the rear hall, a small sewing room and a bed room or den, main bed room in front is 14x14 ft. In this plan it is designed to finish three rooms on the second floor, full 8 ft. in height, the first story rooms being 8 ft. 6 in. in height.

The finish of the first floor throughout is in mission oak, with oak floors. The second story rooms are finished in fir and stained with a fir floor. The cost is estimated at $3,500, exclusive of heating and plumbing.

Johnson Wants Off Bond Of Dr. G. B. Nye

Columbus, O., Oct. 19.—Prosecutor Turner received a letter Friday morning from J. W. Johnson, editor of the Waverly Democrat at Waverly, Ohio, and former state printer, demanding that he be relieved as bondsman of Dr. Geo. B. Nye, state representative from Waverly, who lately confessed his part in the plundering of the last general assembly.

Editor Johnson states that since Dr. Nye "has lately turned confessor" he desires to be relieved from the responsibility of a bondsman. Prosecutor Turner made an investigation of the criminal court bond book, but was unable to discover the name of Editor Johnson therein. It is possible that Mr. Johnson went security for Dr. Nye under some of the indemnity agreements which were given the surety companies at the time of the exposure.

The present bondsmen of Dr. Nye are W. M. Johnson, Madison A. Brown and James T. Blazer.

ORATORS WERE ON HANDS YOU BET

The rain, certainty of defeat, and counter attractions, wrought havoc with the attendance at the meeting of the Young Men's Taff club in the Turley building Friday night. A few scattering members who braved the elements and the temptations of pleasure discussed the work of getting out the voters on election day and in straightening the backbones of those Republicans who had a tendency to waver. Several informal addresses were delivered, Willard Gustin, Sherrard Johnson and William Meyer playing the leading roles of orator, the orators taking turns in speechifying and in playing audience.

ALMOST AN ACCIDENT

An accident similar to the one at Scioto Furnace, in which Mrs. Vina Colegrove was badly injured, was narrowly averted near the Peebles Brick company's plant the other day. A yard engine in charge of Bob Garrett was backing down. Brakeman Frank Cramer was perched on the end of a flat car, when he noticed a woman carrying a dinner bucket start across the track. He shouted warning to her, but there was a wind stirring at the time and she failed to hear him. The woman seemed bewildered and though she could easily have stepped over in ample time, turned back in the direction she had come, the train missing her by not over two feet.

Mrs. Lou Baum Asking Divorce

Suit for divorce has been filed in the Hamilton county courts by Mrs. Lou Baum against the local ex-saloon keeper, on the grounds of extreme cruelty and gross neglect of duty.

It will be remembered that Mr. and Mrs. Baum have figured conspicuously in the past in litigation over the estate of Mr. Baum. The couple were married in Cincinnati.

At the time Mrs. Baum alleges that she was led to believe that her husband was a millionaire of Portsmouth. As balm for her disappointment she asks divorce, alimony and restoration to her maiden name.

Attractive Window

Two very nifty window displays are those to be seen at the Wear-U-Well shoe store this week. They are the handiwork of C. W. Hamilton, manager of the local store. One represents a fall scene, with autumn leaves strewn over the ground and an old rail fence forming the background. Another shows the proper solution of the high cost of living. The solution is the purchase of Wear-U-Well shoes. Standing in the window is a barrel of coal, a basket of potatoes, pumpkins and other things which are easier to buy by saving on shoes.

HIP BROKEN BY A FALL

They say that the judge introduced himself to Adams contains as the most non-partisan candidate who has ever been before the people of Southern Ohio with leanings to—well, it depended upon the political faith of the voter he happened to be talking to.

GUARDIAN IS ANXIOUS TO BUILD

An application has been filed in the probate court by Mollie Zaph, guardian of her husband, Thomas Zaph, asking for authority to build six houses on the Zaph lands in Kinney's lane.

The court has appointed Cread Milstead, George Lowry and John Jones, the latter, as commissioners to investigate and decide whether or not the cost of contemplated improvements would be a wise investment.

James C. Cassell arrived here from Roanoke, Va., Friday for a visit to the N. & W. commissary.

PIRATES LOOK GREAT FOR 1913

While the Reds were here Eddie Donald had quite a chat with his former teammates. The Reds to a man say New York will not come through with another pennant next year. They claim that if they don't bring the bunting to Cincinnati it will be copied by Pittsburgh. Mike Mitchell and Hobbs says the Pirates' pitching staff is easily the best in either the American or National League.

UMPIRES GET FAT FEES

New York, Oct. 18.—It isn't often that baseball umpires have an opportunity to rejoice, but this afternoon was an exception for Umpires O'Loughlin, Evans, Miller and Klein, when they stepped out to the National Baseball commission's office to receive their checks for umpiring the world's series between the Giants and Red Sox. For all the abuse on the diamond they have been subjected to during the season from players and fans these judges of play were rewarded when on being handed their checks it was seen they were made out for $1,000 instead of $500, the amount the commission originally had set as their remuneration for officiating the big game.

GIANTS LEAVE FOR HOMES

New York, Oct. 19.—Most of the members of the New York National League baseball team were today on their way to their homes, each with a check for $2,500 in his pocket as his share of the world's series proceeds. Subdued by their defeat at the hands of Boston, the players are anxious to forget baseball for a while. Meyers, Snodgrass and Shaffer will leave together for California next week. Herzog will spend a brief vacation at his farm in Maryland, and plans later to take a winter course in agriculture at Cornell. Mathewson expects to put in a fortnight hunting in the Carolinas. The destinations of the other players range all the way from Cuba to Indiana.

IT WOULD BE SOME FIGHT

There is talk of bringing Jack Britton and Puckey McFarland together in a ten-round bout in New York. Both are big fighters. They are the cleverest lightweight in the arena and a scrap by these speed boys would no doubt attract a record-breaking crowd to Madison Square Garden. Britton administered a fine lashing to Leach Cross, admittedly one of the best two-handed fighters in the lightweight class.

Modern Athletes Have Degenerated

Fed Sullivan, one of the ever-to-be-remembered figures of the national pastime, and who piloted the St. Louis Browns to a pennant back in the '80s, does not think the modern players compare with those of his time. "I notice," said the veteran Ted, "there is really one thing that appears to be a lost art in the game nowadays, and that is catching. Now, don't think I am trying to run the playing of these modern and progressive days of the pastime down. No, indeed, not for a long shot, for I think without a doubt the improvements made since I was handling the players have put the game away ahead of what it was in the old days, but at the same time do not get the idea that the old fellows could play ball."

"Take, for instance," the catching, as I referred to it," continued Ted, "show me a catcher today who could tap a runner with the ease and grace of Mike Kelly, and yet he didn't go out and stand in the runner's way like the fellows do nowadays. No, not a bit of it. It's really a wonder that there are not more fellows that there are in these days. Yes, I often wonder over this situation and can only come to one conclusion, and that is, the umpires fail to do their duty when they actually see a catcher or second or third baseman block a runner when he is coming on the dead run and call the runner out because he failed to touch the base. When in reality he was unlawfully interfered with."

"Now, anyone can see this isn't right, but still in every game in the season, and every day and sometimes almost every thing, the rule of unlawful interference is broken right before the umpire's eyes and yet the poor devil who is trying for the bag is the sufferer. Instead of the man who blocks him, 'why, jabbers,' continued Sullivan, 'why, every man in the old days had the now famous fadeaway slide down to perfection, and yet could not steal home on Kelly, and he didn't tag them with his feet, either.'"

What in the world is the matter with the boys in the Peerless League? The scores they are making in their match games remind one of the totals in a high school league. Rarely do they put up average 100 per game. Take the games for Friday night as an example. Only six men out of a total of thirty averaged as good as 100. The others fell by the wayside and rolled scores that would not give them a team standing in an national tournament. Something is decidedly wrong. The averages are in the shape, plus of excellent timber and balls smooth and round. Yet the rollers fail to do anything worthy of class, that is taken as a whole. In the games last night the Straus Specials rolled fairly good games. Their highest was 294, the best score of the season, and one that will stand for some time judging from the way the other teams are going. The Straus boys copped three straight, from the Eschborn Five and are now at the 500 per cent mark. Charles Mathewson was the individual star, he rolling a total of 322 pins, "fish" Conwell came next with 229, and incidentally getting 211 in his last game. These games were rolled at the Play House Mill alleys.

At the Play House the Ows captured two out of three from Distel's Five, while at Distel's alleys Barron Brothers took three straight from the Don't Worrys. The scores:

CALL FOR LOYAL SOLDIERS, ISSUED BY FIRST CHURCH
A little sunshine, the kind that makes a fellow feel like a two year old, is all that is asked by the members of the First Christian Bible School tomorrow. If that request is granted, watch out for a big attendance—why if 850 happen to be present, Superintendent Charles M. Howland won't care a rap if his soldiers don't take a hat order for a month of Sundays—that's how wrapped up in the Sunday school Mr. Howland is.
And then Rev. Brooks who has been in attendance to the big Sunday School Convention at Louisville, Ky., will be home with a message for all. He will, as ever, have something of interest to impart to his big class of 500 souls. You can rest assured he will explain the lesson in the proper way, for as a bible student and teacher he has few equals and no superiors.
The First Christian Bible School is "perking" up these fall days and it is now the intention of the Superintendent to average at least 1000 for each Sunday during the fall and winter. The fine part of this school is that when the members take into their heads to do a thing, they can always give odds that they will do it or just a home string in trying.
The contests which have been started only recently will have their first skirmish Sunday and it will be interesting to know which one will win the first lap. Jesse Beck, whose class of bright young men were promoted to the intermediate department on last Sunday, declares that he will win the first game and thus have the edge on the others. Jesse is a regular John McGraw when it comes to engineering plays.
Mrs. William Yeager, who also teaches a boys' class, comes forward with the statement that the time has now come when the women are to show the men a thing or two. Her boys are in the fight to win and insist that Beck's boys will have to go some to keep within seeing distance. Charles Quickel hops up with the statement that his boys should not be overlooked in the contest, for they are out to capture the prize and propose to do it. Some determination in this contest, eh!
There is another scrap that should not be overlooked, and that is between the Loyal Sons taught by Superintendent Howland and the young women of John Ault's class. If the "Sons" do not get a double shuffle on them the Audites will bent them so badly that they will be ashamed to look in the mirror for at least a month after the contest is brought to a close.
Taken all in all, the First bible school is right now in fighting trim and if some records are not on his trip around the globe, there will be disappointment and chagrin written all over the faces of the leaders.
By the way, Superintendent Howland wants to see not less than 550 smiling faces in that class.
P. S.—Come out and hear the splendid orchestra under the leadership of Prof. Bode—the best in the city, so the members of the school think.
Don't forget the motto: "Work, Push, Boost!"

Preaching at 7 p. m. Subject, "The Giants that We Are to Overcome in the Battle of Life." The pastor will tell you what these giants are, and how that every Christian can slay them, and tell you the weapons to use in order to be successful in the great battles of life. Don't fail to be present; but come, thou, and all thy house and we will do thee good. You must always bear in mind that we can't succeed without your co-operation, and we must have it.

Big Rally Day At Trinity on Sunday
Tomorrow is rally day at Trinity, and there will be a rally all along the line from the little tots in Miss Stockham's class to the men in the big bible class.
Every class in the school wants every member present and all the members that can be enrolled.
The entire school under the leadership of the superintendent, Dr. B. Anderson and the pastor, Dr. Scott are preparing for the great crowd one that will break all records.
It does not take much excitement to get a crowd at Trinity, but at least 1500 is the mark set for Sunday and with good weather it should go away past that mark.
The following is the program: other numbers may be added, and this feature will be held after the short lesson session:
Selection, Orchestra.
Recitation, — Harry Mathiott Jr.
Exercise, Six Girls.
Song, "Loyalty," School.
The music of the orchestra, under the leadership of Miss Alice Hinkle, is always a feature in itself, but Sunday their selections will be in the nature of a musical treat for all.
Every member both large and small, who possesses the distinction of being a member of Trinity Sunday School, should make an effort to be there on Sunday morning. Mr. Breeco's class of young men will please take note.
The men's bible class will hold a short session with Prof. Finney in charge. The lesson will be, "The Mission of the Gentiles," and the golden text, "He that Cometh unto Me, I will in no Wise Cast Out." This is one of the finest lessons of the series and Prof. Finney can be depended upon to make it very interesting to all. There are no dull sessions of the men's bible class.
After the lesson comes, the choosing of sides or brigades for the tug of war or new members to be waged by the class for several weeks. The captains have been chosen and also the names of the brigades, which will be "Rough Riders," and "Steam Rollers." Col. Park Mills, who led the "Pull" brigade last year will captain one brigade. In the last engagement Park showed he was a born leader and as resourceful as Jake Stahl of the Red Sox. The other brigade will be captained by L. C. Scott, and every one knows his brigade will be well handled, and in the contest to the finish line.
After the contest has run its limit there will be a big feed and a general good time at which pipes of peace will be smoked, and the class united again.
Every member of the class is urged to be present tomorrow. Some of the members through neglect or carelessness have been making a sort of "David Harum" record for attending. You know Harum was not much of a church goer, but prominently his sister he would attend regularly on Thanksgiving, and in five years he never missed but four Thanksgivings. None of the fellows up there are quite as bad as that, but there is room for improvement.
Everybody come!

"Soap Box and Other Primaries"
Two of our foremost citizens, Mr. Taft and Mr. Roosevelt, seem to have a difference of opinion as to which one ought to be chosen for president of these merry old states. Somebody started something. The "Soap Box" primary was coined and we're hearing about it yet, but not from me. I'm not spellbinding.
But I can't forget the rousing old "Shoe Box" primary a few years ago, when the "common people" were the voters and our shoes jumped to the fore, were nominated on the run and have been re-elected in a landslide every season since as the real shoe leaders in this city.
Vote for them next time! Come in and be fitted.

TASTE, SMELL AND HEARING RESTORED
A Simple, Harmless Remedy Quickly Relieves Catarrhal Deafness
The thousands who suffer the miseries of colds and catarrh and claim they have never found a cure can get instant relief by simply snorting the nostrils with Ely's Cream Balm.
Unlike internal medicines which upset the stomach, or strong snuffs which only aggravate the trouble, this cleansing, healing antiseptic Balm instantly reaches the seat of the trouble, stops the nasty discharge, clears the nose, head and throat, and brings back the sense of taste, smell and improves the hearing. More than this, it strengthens the weakened and diseased tissues, thus protecting you against a return of the trouble. This remedy will cure a cold in a day, and prevent its becoming chronic or resulting in catarrh.
Nasal catarrh is an inflammation of the membrane lining the air passages, and cannot be reached by mixtures taken into the stomach, nor can it be cured by snuffs and powders, which only cause additional irritation. Don't waste time on them. Get a 50 cent bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist, and after using it for a day you will wish you had tried it sooner.
Mothers should give the children Ely's Cream Balm for colds and croup. It is perfectly harmless and pleasant to take.

Bought A Car Load Of I. H. C. Trucks

Mr. R. S. Prichard has just returned from Cincinnati, where he was attending the vehicle show. He purchased a carload of the well-known I. H. C. trucks, which are to be shipped at once. Mr. Prichard states that there are a great many of the grocers who will buy trucks for delivering their groceries this winter, and it is a cheaper, safer and more up-to-date method than the horse vehicle, as the horses are liable to slip and fall on the icy streets, and with our many paved streets, the auto deliveries will soon be the leading mode of delivery.

POWER and ECONOMY

ALL AUTOMOBILE OWNERS HAVE AT TIMES WISHED FOR JUST A LITTLE MORE POWER. You Can ASK Any of Them If This is Not True.

The Buick has been the most powerful and for 1913 they are still stronger than ever and with this power you get economy. There are several reasons for this. The Buick is the lightest car giving the same power. The engine is a valve-in-the-head construction, it being a proven fact that a valve-in-the-head motor gives 20 per cent more efficiency. Now don't be deceived into buying a big heavy car which has no power. Of course all cars will run, and you can go anywhere with them, but it takes more gasoline and oil to get the same results than you can obtain in a Buick. In an economy test in Cincinnati this year a "35" Buick with five passengers went 41 miles only using one and a third gallons of gasoline, beating fifty other competitors.

This is one of the several hundred reasons why you should buy a Buick, as they are the most economical car to own, giving you more power at less cost, and when you have plenty of power and do not need to run your car on a strain, the car will last longer and the up-keep will be lighter.

NOW DON'T BUY UNTIL YOU HAVE STUDIED THE MERITS OF THE BUICK

Paige Car Is One That Always Goes

The securing of the Paige-Detroit agency by the Portsmouth Automobile & Machine company, on Gallia street, makes an interesting story for prospective buyers. During the past season the members of the firm, Messrs. J. E. Shump and Fred Worthington, decided they needed a car to sell for $1100 to $1200 to complete their lines. So they started out to secure the best they could find on the market.

Trips were made to Indianapolis, Detroit and other cities where automobiles are made, and the actual manufacture of the machines investigated. The skilled mechanics from the local garage were also sent out investigating.

Then the knowledge thus gained was compared and the decision reached that the best thing to be had was the Paige-Detroit at $1,000.

The Paige is not an experiment. It has stood the test of successive seasons, and is better than ever this year. It is complete in every way, down to an extra demountable rim and tire, prestolite tank, etc. It has all the power that could be asked for; is classy looking, comfortable and is economical to run. It is just the car for a doctor, or anyone else who wants a machine that will "always go."

It will pay to investigate the merits of this machine.

GIVING AWAY GASOLINE

Practically every man who drives a car some time in his driving experience has been stopped on the road by another driver who has been stranded for want of gasoline. There are few to whom such an appeal would be made in vain, but the question is whether in such cases payment should be insisted upon. It is difficult to imagine a man who has obtained a supply in this manner on the road not offering to pay for the gasoline he has obtained, but exceptions to this rule are by no means rare. It must be remembered that, as a rule, a motorist has not more gasoline with him than he thinks he will require, and the mere fact that he is prepared to supply another with sufficient to allow him to get to the next town is to some extent a sacrifice, not to say an inconvenience on his part. Some owners of cars have refused to accept payment for gasoline supplied in this manner, but this is the wrong policy to adopt. Payment should always be offered and accepted, and one can see no reason why any motorist should be out of pocket over a transaction of this kind. It is sufficient for the stranded motorist to remain in the "Good Samaritan's" debt, so far as trouble and inconvenience are concerned, without the added obligation of not being allowed to pay the cost of the gasoline he has begged from some one else.—Motor Print.

What To Do When Your Car Skids

American genius discovered that if sufficient effort is put upon a chain, the weight of a car itself automatically and effectively stops a tendency to slide or skid on a muddy road. After making that discovery the next thing to be done was to make a chain in such form that it could easily be put on and taken off the wheel. Genius took care of that and few devices have done more to increase the safety of the man in the car than has the chain.

It is an easy matter to be safeguarded against this form of accident by going prepared when one starts out in the rain. Nothing gives a greater feeling of security than "chains on all four"; for, of all skids, the front wheel variety is most to be dreaded, as it is the hardest to counteract by manipulation of the steering wheel. But in the driest weather the efforts of the street sprinkler may be encountered or a sudden shower may come up so short a distance from home or your next stop, that you would rather take the risk than get out in the rain to put on the chains. In such contingencies, the ability to do the right thing at the right time is a great help. This is the advice of a seasoned motorist:

First of all, drive slowly over the wet stretch. Like the Irishman's fall, it isn't the speed that hurts; it's the sudden stop that does the damage. So, by all means avoid putting on the brakes, as that simply locks the rear wheels and makes it easier for them to slide by preventing their natural tendency to roll ahead. The moment the car starts to slide off at the rear, turn the front wheels sharply in the same direction as the rear ones are skidding. Both pairs then present an acute angle to the line of slide movement, and the rear wheels will resume rolling and follow the front wheels instead of skidding. Turning the front wheels in the other direction will aggravate the tendency to slide to a dangerous degree.

After all is said, the best precaution is to have a set of chains.

Graphite Is A

Good Foundation

When a motor has been taken down for a thorough cleaning, it is a good plan before putting it together to rub into the dry surfaces of the cylinder walls, pistons, rings and the main connecting rod and piston pin bearings—in fact, all points where there is friction—graphite mixed with cylinder oil to the consistency of a rather thin paste. If the lubricant is applied with a swab on the end of a stick it will be less disagreeable to handle. It should be vigorously rubbed in and then most of it wiped off. The theory is that the graph-

She Reads The Auto Page

From away out on the Golden Slope, Mrs. George W. Cole, a former Portsmouth resident, writes to correct the statement in The Times that Ohio is the second state in the number of automobiles owned, claiming that distinction for California.

More than that, she has gone to the trouble to get the proof. From the secretary of state of Ohio she learns that Ohio owns 61,155 cars, while from the same official in California she has certificate that in that state are 84,428 privately owned automobiles.

Stating that Ohio has 4,515,719 population and California 1,702,677, she concludes with the proud boast: "No place equal to the Golden State; California leads them all!"

Has Third Buick

Dr. A. O. Peters, a former Portsmouth resident, motored to this city yesterday evening from his home at Dayton. He is accompanied by Mrs. Peters and their little daughter, Phyllis. They are enroute to Sciotoville to visit Dr. Peter's parents.

Dr. Peters has prospered in Dayton, and has a lucrative practice. He made the trip here in his new 1913 Model 31 Buick, and negotiated the entire distance without trouble. This is the third car which Dr. Peters has owned, and they have all been Buicks.

Keep Chamois Clean

After filtering gasoline through a chamois, do not lay the skin down on a dirty floor or bench, for it will pick up much dirt that will be carried into the tank at the next filling. Hang the chamois up on a clean nail or line.

Tire Waste May Be Easily Prevented

Within the next four weeks, thousands of motorists in all parts of the country will be laying up their cars for the winter. Hundreds of these cars are equipped with good tires, which if properly taken care of during the cold months, will be in serviceable condition next spring.

The percentage of tire waste during the winter's inactivity is very large, due in a majority of instances to the fact that owners do not know how to store their tires to protect them against the ravages of cold weather. To reduce this waste, the service bureau of the United States Tire Company gives some timely advice on the subject.

In laying up a car the tires should be removed from the rims and washed thoroughly with soap and water. They should then be carefully wrapped in strips of paper or cloth and stored in a dark place, which is kept as nearly as possible at a temperature of 50 degrees.

If the tires are to remain on the wheels for a considerable length of time while the car is out of service, the wheels should be jacked up and only about five pounds of air left in each tire. This keeps the tubes in shape and also preserves their softness and pliability.

When the wheels are not jacked up and the car is allowed to stand for any length of time the tires should be kept well inflated and the car moved occasionally, so that the tires do not flatten from standing too long on one spot.

It lays a good foundation for subsequent lubrication and insures a good start without danger of early cutting or scoring of bearing surfaces.

Women Decide In Buying Of The Cars

That the woman of the family decides the purchase of three out of four of our automobiles sold in this city was the statement made by Mr. Walter Patterson, the Hudson dealer today.

"The history of three out of every four of our sales is about as follows," said Mr. Patterson today. "The man in the household narrows down the choice to two or three automobiles, which he believes to be mechanically right. Almost invariably at this point the woman of the household is brought into the prospective purchase, by reason of her good judgment relative to automobile beauty, comfort and convenience.

"The long, beautiful, harmonious lines of the New Hudson '37' have aroused such enthusiasm on the part of women that in a number of instances the Hudson's beauty has been the deciding factor in the purchase.

"Another point that is particularly attractive to women is the easy riding qualities of the car and in this connection the twelve inch Turkish type upholstery of the Hudson has decided purchases in this car's favor.

"Women like beauty in nonconformity with a car, and more thoroughly appreciate that beauty when it is achieved in a simple manner. This is one of the points for which the Hudson has considerable reputation, for the simplicity of its lines are worthy of the attention they have attracted.

"Inasmuch as many women, whose husbands purchase cars, expect to drive them themselves, the fact that there is nothing in the operation of the New Hudson '37' part of women that in a number of instances the Hudson's beauty has been the deciding factor in the purchase.

Chalmers Cars Captured Prizes

For electrical self-cranking and electric lighting strongly appeals to women. It is merely necessary to press a button in starting the motor—eliminating the cranking task—and all lights are operated by three buttons on the dash. Gasoline and oil pressure is simply indicated by gauges in plain view. As a consequence there is nothing about the car that requires any strength to operate. The shifting of the gears necessitates no effort whatever.

"Thousands of women are driving Hudsons in all sections of the United States, because of the extraordinary responsiveness of the car. A woman's judgment in selecting an automobile—one that she will be proud to ride in—is usually sound; and I feel that the male head of the house is wont to take her advice."

Chalmers Cars Captured Prizes

Chalmers cars were again put in the champion class on the Sioux City Speedway, October 4th and 5th. H. A. Wetmore with a Chalmers "Thirty-six" stock car won seven firsts and one second out of eight races. In the fifty-mile free-for-all event, the Chalmers finished five miles ahead of its nearest competitor.

On the first day of the Sioux City races, the Chalmers defeated in addition to all local cars, an Ohio Ninety-nine and a Colby, in two ten-mile and one thirty mile events. The Ohio and Colby were both special built factory racing machines.

On the next day the Chalmers won every event, including a ten-mile class event, also a two and ten-mile free-for-all and the fifty mile free-for-all in which the Chalmers left its nearest competitor five miles behind.

Wetmore won three new cups, $350 in cash, and gained permanent possession of two large trophies with his new Chalmers. The two trophies of which the Chalmers won permanent possession were first won with a Chalmers "Thirty" in the Sioux City races last year.

Taken To The Pen

G. W. Duncan and W. A. Stewart, who were Friday sentenced to three years each in the penitentiary by Judge Blair, were today taken to the big Columbus prison by Sheriff Eckhart.

Duncan was sent up for stealing brass from the B. & O. and Stewart for non-support.

Says Husband Beat Her With A Club

Charges of cruelty are contained in the divorce application filed in the common pleas court Saturday by Attorney Holcomb & Miller for Maggie Magnot against her husband, John Magnot, whom she married in January, 1910.

The wife complains that Magnot has frequently struck and abused her and she asserts that he beat her with a club on Oct. 19 last, and that as a result of such treatment she was compelled to leave him. She secured an injunction enjoining him from disposing of his property, consisting of a team of horses, farming implements and one-half interest in the products of the farm of his brother. She also asks for alimony.

FOR EVERY BOY AND GIRL

A MORNING CALL.

I was out in my garden, with basket and shears,
Adding rose after rose to my store.
When a rat-a-tat-tat faintly came to my ears,
I ran round to reach the front door.
I arrived there too late; just a card on the mat,
Reading: Mary Amelia Evangeline Pratt.
I pictured her, dignified, pious and precise,
With a "morning and prayer" sort of air.
Then I looked down the long gravel walk in a trice,
If perchance she might still linger there.
And sure enough right down, the path, pit-a-pat,
Trotted Mary Amelia Evangeline Pratt!

By F. H. WHEELAN.

At 1634 Taylor Street, in the city of San Francisco, there stands to-day a house, which, in the greatest fire of modern times, was saved from the flames by the flag. When over four hundred blocks of buildings lay in smoking ruins, this house was the only one left standing unconsumed along the east side of the full length of Taylor Street—a distance of twenty-eight blocks, nearly two full miles.

The house is one of the prominent residences on one of the great hills of the city, known as Russian Hill; and was the first large dwelling-house erected in that section of San Francisco, away back in the early days. It is not built of lumber that grew upon the Pacific Coast. Like many of the houses of pioneer times, it came in the hold of a vessel around the Horn. In the far-off state of Georgia the pine-trees grew; and there the house was framed and fashioned before it started on its long sea journey of thirteen thousand miles. As shown in the picture, some additions have been made, and its exterior has been covered with California shingles; but for the most part it stands to-day as it was first framed in Georgia.

It has long been the home of patriots. Its owner, Mr. Eli T. Sheppard, served as a member of the Eighty-fifth Ohio Volunteers in the Civil War; rendered valuable service to his country as United States Consul at Tientsin, China, from 1869 to 1873; and, in 1876, was appointed by President Grant international law adviser for the imperial Japanese cabinet. Another portion of the residence is occupied by Mr. E. A. Dakin, a veteran of the Civil War. Mr. Sheppard had gathered within its walls a large and valuable collection of oriental treasures. Among them were costly vases given by the Emperor of Japan; a sword presented by Li Hung Chang; a superb lacquer cabinet, the gift of the Chinese Empress to Mrs. Sheppard. On the other hand, flags had long been Mr. Dakin's hobby. He had one room entirely covered with American flags.

Some of them had played a part in history. There was the jack of the Oregon; the rear-admiral flag of the Bennington; the jack of the Marblehead while at Cuba; the launch flag of Dewey's Olympia; and on the walls of this room hung the great banner of the Stars and Stripes that was to save the house and all its treasures from destruction.

At the time of the earthquake and fire, April 18, 1906, Mrs. Brindley, a daughter of Mr. Sheppard, was there awaiting the arrival of her husband to take steamer for Japan. She had long resided in that country, and had had "earthquake experience," so to speak. Accordingly, as soon as the earth had ceased trembling, she proceeded to fill the bath-tubs and all other receptacles in the house with water. She feared that the disturbance of the earth had broken the supply mains; and hardly had she filled the last pitcher when her fear was proved well-grounded. The water ceased to flow. But the first step that made it possible for the flag to save the house had been taken. Mr. Sheppard and Mr. Dakin took the second step. In order that the household might have a supply of drinking water, they brought home from a neighboring grocery a dozen or so bottles of water charged with carbonic acid gas,—the kind of bottles where you press a lever at the top, and the water fizzes out in a stream under pressure. They are commonly called "siphons."

At this time no one thought the house in danger. It had sturdily withstood the earthquake; and the fire was many blocks away. But all Wednesday and Wednesday night and all of Thursday the fire raged in fury; and at last it came creeping up the slope of Russian Hill. The flames reached the block in which the house was situated. The heat grew intense. The sides of the house sent forth smoke. The veranda on the east broke into flames, and the under side of the eaves on the north and east kindled to a blaze.

Mr. Sheppard and his family had taken our last look at their home with its treasures, and had sought refuge with friends across the bay. Mr. Dakin had stayed to the last, hoping against hope. But now all hope was gone. The house was burning, and he was warned away. He determined to hoist his largest American flag and let the house meet destruction with the colors flying fair above it. He rushed to his room of flags, selected his largest Stars and Stripes, mounted to the roof, attached the great flag to the halyards, and flung it to the breeze. Then, with a feeling somewhat akin to respect for the conquering power of the great fire king, snaring forward in irresistible ruin, and with a spirit somewhat akin to the unconquerable pluck that stirred the breasts of his comrades in the days of the Civil War, he dipped the flag in salute. Three times the glorious banner rose and fell; and then, fastening the halyards, Mr. Dakin descended the stairs, locked the door, and with a heavy heart left the house to its fate. High in the air, shining bright in the light of sun and flames, above the house of pines that had grown by the shores of the Atlantic, streaming forth on a breeze that came fresh from the Pacific, stood "Old Glory."

The white stars upon that flag were there as symbols of the States of the Union. One star was there for California and one was there for Georgia; but three blocks away, to the eastward, at the corner of Vallejo Street and Montgomery Avenue, at that moment, there chanced to be a company of men who represented all the stars on that flag's field of blue—a company of the 20th United States Infantry.

Under the command of a young lieutenant, the company had been on its way to San Francisco on the day of the earthquake; and had been delayed on its journey twenty-four hours. It had entered the city, Thursday afternoon, by the ferry from Oakland, and, was at that moment marching under orders to go into camp at Washington Square. The lieutenant and his men had seen the flag rise and fall in salute; and saw it now as it streamed forth in beauty amidst smoke and flame.

"Boys," shouted the young lieutenant, "a house that flies a flag like that is worth saving!" His men responded with a cheer; and as Mr. Dakin was sadly wending his way down the northern slope of Russian Hill, soldiers of the 20th United States Infantry were dashing up the eastern slope at a double-quick. No time was lost. They tore away the burning wood-work of the veranda; broke open the door; and discovered the bath-tubs filled with water. Some of them carried earth from the garden; other mixed it in the bath-tubs to the consistency of wet plaster; and then certain of their number stationed themselves at different windows and as the wet mud was carried to them, they bombarded every spot that had kindled into flame.

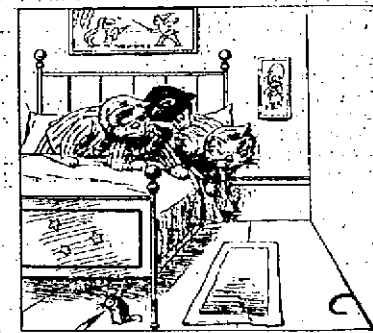

One by one the houses in the block burnt up and burnt out until the old house stood alone. Every blaze that had started upon its eaves and sides had been extinguished save one. There was one spot under the eaves at the northeast corner that could not be bombarded successfully. Unless the fire at that point was put out, all that had been done were done in vain.

The soldiers were equal to the emergency. A squad mounted to the roof. One of the men lay flat upon the edge, and while four of his comrades held him fast by the legs, he leaned afar out over the wide old-fashioned eaves. Others passed to him bottles of the water charged with carbonic acid gas. And there, hanging far over the edge of the roof so that he might be able to direct the stream of water on the fire burning fiercely beneath the eaves, he squirted the fizzing contents of bottle after bottle, until the flame and the last ember were extinguished—and the house was saved.

APPLE BUTTER.

"Oh, goodness me!" said Johnny Green.
"My ignorance is utter!
I don't know what the people mean
Who talk of 'apple butter.'
Do you think anybody would
Apples with butter spread?
And do you think they could be good
To eat instead of bread?"

"Oh, Johnny Green, you're green indeed!"
Said little Tommy Smart:
"Although your history looks you read,
And fears their lore by heart,

If common knowledge you could claim,
"I would not be to your loss;
Why, apple butter's just the same
As our own apple sauce.
And in some distant country spot,
Where apples grow quite thick,
They cook it in a great big pot,
And stir it with a stick."

Then Johnny Green he wagged his head,
And Tommy Smart wagged his;
"What apple butter is!"
"I am so glad to know," John said,

A FRIEND IN NEED

BY CLARENCE E. MULFORD

HOPALONG CASSIDY had a grouch. It was three weeks old and the signs threatened contagion. His foreman, tired of the atmosphere he had created on the ranch and driven to desperation, had seized the first chance that came to get rid of him temporarily, and the blues with him. No one knew the cause for Hoppy's unusual state of mind although there were many conjectures. Even Red Connors was forced to guess and when Red had to do that he was warranted in believing the matter serious.

Johnny Nelson made no secret of his opinion and derived from it a great amount of satisfaction, which he admitted with a grin to his foreman.

"Buck," he said, "Hoppy told me he went broke playin' poker over in Grant with Dave Wilkes and them Lawrence brothers, an' that shore explains it. He's got pack sores from carryin' his kickin'."

"It was due to come to him, an' Dave was just th' boy to deliver it. That's th' whole trouble, an' I know it, an' I'm glad they trimmed him."

"Wrong, son, dead wrong," Buck replied. "He takes his beatin' with a grin, an' money never did worry him none. No poker game could leave a well like that on him. He's been doin' somethin' he don't want us to know—made a fool of himself some way. I've known him too long an' well to believe gamblin' had any hand in it. But this little trip he's takin' will fix him up all right—an' I couldn't send a better man."

"Well, it's lucky for him you picked him to go," rejoined Johnny, who thought more of the woful absence than he did of his own skin. "Cause I was goin' to lick him shore, if it went on much longer. Me an' Red an' Billy was goin' to beat him up good till he forgot his dead injuries an' took some interest in his friends."

Buck laughed. "Well, th' three of you might 'a' done it, though I'm some doubtful. Now look here—you've been a-hangin' 'round th' bunk-house too much lately. From now on you've got to earn yore grub. Get out on that west line an' bustle."

"You know I've had a toothache!" snorted Johnny, indignantly, his face as sober as that of a judge.

"You'll have a stomach-ache for grub if you don't earn yore right to eat, purty soon," retorted Buck. "You ain't never had a toothache in yore whole life, an' you don't know what one is. G'wan, now, or I'll give you a backache that'll ache!"

"Huh! Devil of a way to treat a sick man!" and Johnny departed exultantly, whistling with much noise and no music. But he was sorry for one thing—he wished he had seen Hopalong meet his Waterloo.

While the outfit blessed the range deal which took him out of their small circle for a time, Hopalong rode farther and farther into the northwest and was frequently lost in abstraction which, judged by its effect upon him, must have been serious. Three weeks before while at Grant, he had borrowed a horse from Dave Wilkes and given hot chase to the man who had stolen his own animal; and, catching him, had been talked out of exercising summary vengeance and justice and allowed the self-confessed thief to go. But not content with such a startling breach of range tradition and ethics, he had actually been persuaded into swapping the borrowed animal for his own, which the thief had found just and not equal to the speed desired. Instead of sending hot lead after the eloquent stranger he had sat idly on his recovered mount and watched the other burn up the plain in his haste to go hence.

The borrowed horse was a good one, a successful contender in all distances from one to five miles and had earned its owner and backers much money—and he had parted with it as easily as he would have borrowed five dollars from Red. The story, he had reflected since, was as old as lying—a broken-legged horse, a dying wife forty miles away, and a horse all saddled which needed only to be mounted and ridden.

These thoughts kept him company for a day and when he dismounted before Stevenson's Hotel in Hoyt's Corners he summed up his feelings for the enlightenment of his horse. "D—n it, bronch, I'd give ten dollars right now to know if I was a jackass or not," he growled. "But he was an awful slick talker if he had."

Mr. Cassidy was not known by sight to the citizens of Hoyt's Corners, however well versed they may have been in his numerous exploits of wisdom and folly. Therefore, the habits of Stevenson's Hotel did not recognize him in the gloomy and morose individual who dropped his saddle on the floor with a crash and stamped to the three-legged table at dusk and surlily demanded shelter for the night.

"Gimme a bed an' somethin' to eat," he demanded, eyeing the three men seated with their chairs tilted against the wall. "Do I get it?" he demanded, impatiently.

"You do," replied a one-eyed man, lazily arising and approaching him. "One dollar, now."

"An' take th' rocks outen that bed—I want to sleep."

"A dollar per for every one you find," grinned Stevenson, pleasantly.

"Some folks likes to be rocked to sleep," facetiously remarked one of the pair by the wall, laughing contentedly at his own pun.

"Yo're a droll feller, Charley," chuckled "Old" John Ferris, rubbing his ear. "That's a good one."

"One drink, now," growled Hopalong, mimicking the proprietor and glaring at the "droll feller" and his companion. "An' mind it's a 'good one,'" he admonished the host.

"It's better," smiled Stevenson, whereat "Old" John crossed his legs and chuckled again. "Ridin' long?" he asked.

"Since I started."

"Goin' fur?"

"Till I stop."

"He, he, he," chorled "Old" John, rubbing his ear again and nudging Charley. "He ain't no fool, eh?"

Hopalong took the liquor and tossed it off and, considering a moment, shoved the glass back. "It is good—fill her again." The third was even better and by the time the fourth and fifth joined their predecessors he began to feel a little more cheerful. But even the liquor and an exceptionally well cooked supper could not separate him from his persistent and set grouch. And of liquor he had already had more than his limit. He had always boasted, with truth, that he had never been drunk—and that was one doubtful luxury he could not afford for the reason that more than one man would like to see him for five seconds when liquor had dulled his brain and slowed his speed of hand.

He dropped into a chair by a card table and, baffling all attempts to engage him in conversation, reviewed his troubles in a mumbled soliloquy, the liquor gradually making him careless, but of all the jumbled sounds his companions heard they recognized and retained only the term "Winchester."

"Better go to bed, stranger," the proprietor was saying. "We're th' last up. It's after twelve an' you look sleepy an' tired."

"Said his wife was sick—oh, what you sayin'?"

"You'll find a bed better'n this table, stranger—it's after twelve, an' I want to close up an' get some sleep. I'm tired myself."

"Oh, that's all? Shore I'll go to bed—just like to see anybody stop me! Ain't no rocks in it, hey?"

"Nary a rock," laughed the host, picking up Hopalong's saddle and leading the way to a room off the "office," his guest stumbling after him and growling about the rocks that lived in Winchester. When Stevenson had dropped the saddle by the window and departed, Hopalong sat on the edge of the bed to close his eyes for just a moment before tackling the labor of removing his clothes. A crash and a jar awakened him to find himself on the floor with his back to the bed. He was hot and his head ached a little—and how close and hot and choking the room had become. He thought he had blown out the lamp, but it still burned and three-quarters of the chimney was black with soot. It was unbearable, and after three attempts he blew out the light, stumbled against his saddle and leaned out of the window to breathe. As his lungs took in the fresh air he chuckled wisely and, picking up the saddle, managed to get it and himself through the window and on to the ground without mishap. He would ride for an hour and come back all right, and give the room time to freshen. Not a star could be seen as he groped his way unsteadily towards the rear of the building where he vaguely remembered having seen the corral.

"Huh! Said he lived in Winchester, an' name was Ben Ferris," he muttered, stumbling toward a noise he knew was caused by a horse rubbing against the corral fence. "Lord, it's darker'n cats in—off!" he grunted, recoiling from forcible contact with the fence he sought. Growling words unholy he felt his way along it and finally his arm slipped through an opening and he bumped his head solidly on the top bar of the gate.

As he righted himself his hand struck the nose of a horse and closed mechanically over it. Cowponies look alike in the dark and he grinned as he complimented himself upon finding his so unerringly.

"Can't fool me, of course," he beamed, fumbling at the bars with his free hand and getting them down with a fool's luck. "You can't do it—I got you, first, las' an' always, an' I got you good. Quit rearin', you ol' fool! Stan' still, can't you?" The pony sidled as the saddle hit its back and evoked profane abuse from the puncher as he picked it up to try again, this time successfully. He began to fasten the girth and then paused to reflect, for the pike of the buckle would slide to no hole but the first. "Gettin' fat, ain't you, piebald?" he asked, sarcastically. "You blow yourself up any more an' I'll bust you open!" heaving on the strap with all his might. The "fat" disappeared and Hopalong laughed. "Been learnin' new tricks, ain't you? Got smart since you been travelin', hey?" He fumbled with the bars again and got two back in place and, throwing himself across the saddle as the horse started as hard as it could go, slipped but saved himself by hopping along the ground. When he had secured the grip he wished he mounted with the ease of habit. "G'wan, now, an' easy—it's dark an' my head's bustin'."

While he saddled his mount at the corral he was not aware that two of the three remaining animals had taken advantage of their opportunity and had walked out and made off in the darkness before he replaced the bars, and he was too drunk to care if he had known it.

It did not take him long to learn that something was wrong, and when it finally realized that the man astride it was asleep and that it could go where it pleased the surprised animal quickened pace and headed for Winchester, where it belonged. As day began to break along the horizon and tempered the blackness the horse broke into a canter, which developed signs of irritation in its rider. Finally Hopalong opened his drowsy eyes and looked around like one dazed. Not knowing where he was and too tired and sleepy to waste much thought on a matter of such slight importance, he looked around for a place to finish his sleep. A tree some distance ahead looked inviting and toward it he rode. Habit made him picket the horse before he lay down and as he fell asleep he had vague recollections of having handled a strange picket rope some time recently. The horse slowly turned and stared at the already snoring figure, glanced over the landscape, back to the queerest man it had ever met and then fell to grazing.

Stevenson, having started the fire for breakfast, took a pail and departed toward the spring, but he got no farther than the corral gate, where he dropped the pail and stared, seeing only one horse in the enclosure where the night before there had been three more. He wheeled and dashed toward the "hotel" and his shout brought "Old" John Ferris to the door, sleepy and peevish.

"Our bronchs are gone! Our bronchs are gone!" he yelled, dashing through the doorway and into the room he had assigned to the bibulous and sullen stranger. "I knowed it! I knowed it!" he cried, popping out again as if on springs. "He's gone! He's gone an' took our bronchs with him, th' measly, low-down dog! I knowed he wasn't no good! Go see for yourself while I throw some cold grub on th' table—won't have no time to cook this mornin'." He's got five hours' start on us, but we'll get him before dark, an' hang him."

"What's all th' rumpus?" demanded a sleepy voice from upstairs. "Who's hangin'?" and Charley entered the room very much interested. He was forthwith acquainted with the calamity and lost no time in joining "Old" John at the corral to verify the news.

"John Ferris waved his hand over the scene and explained what he had read in the tracks, to his companion's great irritation, for Charley's keen eye and good training told him all there was to learn and his reading didn't exactly agree with that of "Old" John.

"He's gone an' took our cayuses, Charley; an' that's th' way he came—round th' corner of th' house. He bumped into th' palisade there an' dropped his saddle. When he opened th' bars he took my rear gelding because it was th' fastest, an' then let out th' others to mix us up with th' tracks. See how he went? Had to hop four times on one foot afore he got in th' saddle. An' he left his own critter behind because he knowed it wasn't no good."

Charley had walked into the corral and looked at the brand on the far side of the one horse left and waited impatiently for his companion to cease talking. He took advantage of the first pause "Old" John made and spoke crisply:

"I don't care how he come or what he bumped into. An' if he left that cayuse because he knowed it ain't no good he was drunker'n I thought he was. That's a Barzo cayuse an' no hoss-thief ever worked for that ranch. He left it because he stole it, that's why. An' he didn't let them others out fastest, which it ain't," he finished sarcastically.

"Well, mebbe what you said is—"

"Mebbe nothin'. If he wanted to mix th' tracks would he hopped like that so we'd know which was his?" He knewed we'd pick his trail quick an' he knowed every minute counted. That's why he hopped—yore roan was goin' like h—l—look at them toe prints!"

"H'm! But I heard him say somethin' 'bout Winchester, anyhow," replied "Old" John, glad to change the subject. "Bet that's where he's goin', too. He won't get through that town on no critter wearin' my brand. Everybody knows that roan an'—"

"Quit guessin'!" snapped Charley, beginning to lose some of his respect for old age. "We'll foller th' trail an' don't care where it goes."

"Grub pile!" shouted Stevenson, and the argument was tabled while the three gulped down a cold and uninviting breakfast. In ten minutes they had separated to find horses, in fifteen more they had them and were riding along the trail at top speed, with three other men at their side. Three hundred yards from the corral they pounded out of an arroyo and Charley, who was leading, stood up in his stirrups, looking keenly ahead. Another trail joined the one they were following and ran with and on top of it. This, he reasoned, had been made by one of the strays and would turn away soon. He kept his eyes looking well ahead and soon saw that he was right, and without checking the speed of his horse in the slightest degree he went ahead on the trail of the smaller hoofprints. Stevenson was gaining on him and finally ranged alongside.

Mr. Hopalong Cassidy muttered and stirred and slowly opened his eyes to gaze blankly into those of one of the men who were tugging at his hands and as he stared his stupefied brain started sluggishly to work in an endeavor to explain the unusual experience.

There were five men around him and the two who hauled at his hands stepped back and kicked him. A look of pained indignation slowly spread over his countenance as he realized that they really were kicking him, and with sturdy vigor. He considered a moment and decided that such treatment was quite outrageous and, furthermore, that he must chastise the perpetrators.

"Hey!" he snorted. "What's h—l do you reckon yore doin', anyhow? Kick each other an' I'll help you, but I'll lick th' bunch if you don't stop maulin' me! Ain't you got no manners? Come 'round wakin' a feller up an'—"

"Get up!" snapped Stevenson.

"Why, ain't I seen you before? Somewhere? Sometime?" queried Hopalong, his brow wrinkling from intense concentration of thought. "I've seen a one-eyed coyote somers, lately."

"Get up!" ordered Charley, shortly.

"You've seen me, all right," retorted Stevenson. "Get up, d—n you!"

"Why, I can't—my han's are tied!" exclaimed Hopalong, in great wonder, pausing in his exertions to cogitate upon this remarkable phenomena.

"Use yore feet, you thief," rejoined Stevenson angrily, stepping forward and delivering another kick.

"What's a thief? Shore I'll use my feet, you yaller dog!" yelled the prostrate man, and his boot heel sank into the stomach of the offending Mr. Stevenson with sickening force and landable precision. "Call me a thief, hey! Come pokin' 'round kickin' honest punchers an' callin' names! Anybody want th' other boot?"

Stevenson sat down forcibly and rocked to and fro doubled up and gasping for breath and Hopalong squinted at him and grinned happily. "Hear him sing! Reg'lar ol' Bob White. Sounds like a cow pullin' its hoofs outen th' mud. Called me a thief, he did, jus' now. I won't let nobody—"

Two men grabbed him and raised him up, holding him tightly, and they were not careful to handle him gently. Charley stepped in front of him to Stevenson and caught the front boot in his groin, dropping as if he had been shot. The man on the prisoner's left emitted a yell and loosed his hold to sympathize with a bruised shinbone, and his companion promptly knocked the bound and still intoxicated man down. Bill Thomas swore and eyed the prostrate figure. "Hate to hit a man who can fight like that when he's loaded. But I'm glad he ain't sober."

"You ain't goin' to hit him again!" snapped Jed White, angrily. "I'm ready to hang him, 'cause that's why we're here, but I won't stand for no maulin'. I don't blame him for fightin' an' they didn't have no right to kick him in th' beginnin'."

"Didn't kick him in th' beginnin'," grinned Bill. "Kicked him in th' endin'." Anyhow," he added, seriously. "I didn't hit him hard—didn't have to. Just let go an' shoved quick."

"I'm naturally goin' to clean house," muttered the prisoner, sitting up and looking fierce. "Untie my han's an' gimme a gun or a club, or anythin', an' watch yoreself get licked. Called me a thief! What are you fellows, then? Stickin' me up an' bustin' me for a few measly dollars. Why didn't you take my money an' lemme sleep, stead of wakin' me up an' kickin' me? I wouldn't 'a' cared then."

"Come on, now, get up. We ain't through with you yet," ordered Bill, helping him to his feet and steadying him. "I'm glad you kicked 'em."

"No, you ain't; you can't fool me," gravely assured Hopalong. "You know yore lyin'. What you goin' to do? Ain't I got money enough? By G—d, wish I had an even break with you fellows!"

Stevenson, on his feet again, walked painfully and shook his fist at the captive, from the side. "You'll find out what we want with you, you d—d hoss-thief!" he cried. "We're goin' to tie you to that limb so yore feet'll swing above th' grass, that's what we're goin' to do."

Bill and Jed had their hands full for a moment and as they finally mastered the puncher, Charley came up with a rope. "Hurry up—no use draggin' it out this way. I want to get back to th' ranch before night."

"W'y, I ain't no hoss-thief, you liar!" Hopalong cried. "My name's Hopalong Cassidy an' w'en I tells my friends 'bout this they'll make you hard to find. Gimme a chance an' I'll do it myself, sick as I am!"

"Is that yore cayuse?" demanded Charley, pointing.

Hopalong squinted. "Which one?"

"There's only one there, you fool!"

"That's so," replied Hopalong, surprised. "Never seen it before. My cayuse is—is—where th' devil is it?" he asked, looking around.

"How'd you get that one, then?"

"Never had it—tain't mine," replied Hopalong, with strong conviction.

"You stole that cayuse last night outen Stevenson's corral?"

"Did I? W'y—?" his forehead became furrowed again but the events of the night before were vague in his memory and he only stumbled in his soliloquy. "But I wouldn't swap my cayuse for that boneyard!" he finished triumphantly, as if an appeal to logic would clinch things. The rope went around his neck and a flurry of excitement ensued. When the dust settled he was on his back again and the rope was being tossed over a limb. Just then a hail was heard and a stranger rode up and did to a stand.

Charley's gun glinted as it swung up and the newcomer swore angrily. "What you doin'?" he shouted. "Take that gun off'n me or I'll blow you apart!"

"Mind yore business an' sit still!" Charley snapped. "We've got a hoss-thief an' we're goin' to hang him, regardless."

Hopalong turned his head slowly. "He's a liar, stranger; a plain, squaw-dog liar. An' I'll be much obliged if you'll shoot h—l outen 'em an' let—why, hello, hoss-thief!" he exclaimed, recognizing the other. It was the man he had chased for a horse-thief and then swapped bones with. "Stole any more cayuses?" he asked, grinning, believing that everything was all right now.

"Hean's up!" roared Stevenson, also covering the stranger. "So yore another, hey! We're in luck to-day. Watch him, boys, till I get his gun—if he moves, drop him."

"You fool!" cried Ferris. "He ain't no thief, an' neither am I! My name's Ben Ferris an' I live in Winchester. That's Hopalong Cassidy—Cassidy, of th' Bar-zol!"

"Sit still—you can talk later, mebbey!" snapped Stevenson, warily approaching him. "Watch him, boys!"

"Hold on!" shouted Ferris, murder in his eyes. "Don't you try that—I'll get one of you anyhow! You can listen a minute an' I can't get away."

"Talk quick!"

Ferris pleaded as hard as he knew how and called attention to the condition of their prisoner. "If he did take th' wrong cayuse he was too drunk to know it—good G—d, can't you see he is?" he cried.

"Yep—through yet?"

"No! I ain't started yet!" he yelled. "He did me a good turn, one that I can't never pay back, an' I'm goin' to stop this or go with him. If I go I'll take one of you with me, an' my outfit'll get th' rest." His eyes lighted suddenly and he talked feverishly to gain time. Seeing that Jed White was wavering, Stevenson ordered them to go on with the work and watched Ferris like a cat watches a mouse. But Ferris stood up slowly in his stirrups and shouted at the top of his voice, waving his sombrero frantically. A faint cheer reached his ears and made the lynchers turn quickly and look behind them. Nine men were tearing toward them at a dead run and were due to arrive in a very few minutes.

"Me an' my outfit started out to round up cows an' got jackasses," Ferris laughed. "Now lynch him, d—n you!"

The nine swept up in skirmish order, guns out and ready. "What's th' matter, Ben?" demanded Tom Murphy, ominously, and then swore as he caught sight of the rope.

"Nothin', now. That's Hopalong Cassidy—I'm goin' to take him to th' ranch, when he's sober, an' interduce him to some good friends of his an' he's never seen. Ain't I, Cassidy?"

But Mr. Cassidy made no response. He was sound asleep, as he had been since the advent of his very good and capable friend, Mr. Ben Ferris, of Winchester.
